23D IS GETTING READY TO MOVE

Goes to Fort Benjamin Harrison; New and Modern in Equipment.

Preparations have begun for the removal of the 23d infantry from Fort Bliss to its new station at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

The officers are beginning to pack and contracts for the crating and shipment of the equipment are being arranged. The orders received from the war department Wednesday did not specify when the regiment should leave, but it is understood that the transfer will be made as soon as the regiment is ready, which will be in about 10 days or two weeks. The regiment could be ready to leave within 48 hours, should need arise, but as there is no pressing hurry, things will not be rushed.

Col. E. F. Glenn is expected to return Sunday from Brownsville, where he was summoned to appear as a witness in the neutrality cases on trial there.

All the supplies in the quartermaster's commissary departments will be turned over to the fourth cavalry, which relieves the infantry in the occupancy of Fort Bliss.

The fourth cavalry will move to the post from Camp Steever as soon as it is vacated by the infantry. The contracts for the building of the stables in the conversion of the post to a cavalry camp are expected to be received soon from the quartermaster general's headquarters in Washington. The stables will be accommodations for the mounts of four troops of cavalry, which would be about 300 horses, and storehouse for the forage.

Fort Benjamin Harrison is considered one of the most desirable posts in the country; it has only recently been completed, and is modern in every particular. It is situated about 19 miles from Indianapolis. It is among the finest in the country for general equipment and size. The officers of the 23d, who have been stationed here for some time express general regret at having to break the many ties of friendship formed among El Pasoans, but they are glad to be sent to such a modern post.

Fort Benjamin Harrison has been occupied by the 10th infantry, recently ordered to the Canal zone.
